

One of the striking clinical features of Localized Aggressive Periodontitis is:

- a- Large Amount of plaque deposits
- b- Slow Progression of the disease
- c- Lack of clinical inflammation despite the presence of deep periodontal pockets

Which condition is a contraindication for the gingivectomy procedure?

- a- An adequate zone of attached gingiva
- b- Probing depths at or near the mucogingival junction
- c- Suprabony pockets
- d- Enlargement of interdental gingival

Generalized Aggressive Periodontitis is characterized by:

- a- interproximal attachment loss affecting incisors and molars only.
- b- Interproximal attachment loss affecting at least 3 permanent teeth other than first molars and incisors.
- c- A and b
- d- None of the above

Therapeutic management of Glickman Grade I furcation invasions typically includes:

- a- osteoplasty.
- b- root resection.
- c- enamel matrix derivative.
- d-bone replacement grafts.

Contraindications for osseous resective surgery include all of the following EXCEPT:

- a- pocket elimination.
- b-shallow probing depths.
- c-severely advanced disease.
- d-defects amenable to regeneration.